AFTERNOON TEA

Afternoon tea was introduced during the early 19th century when Anna, the 7th Duchess of Bedford, is said to have complained of “having that sinking feeling” during the time of late afternoon.

Her solution was a pot a tea and a light snack, taken privately in her boudoir during the afternoon.

This trend quickly took on with afternoon tea becoming a very sociable activity, particularly enjoyed by society ladies.

Today afternoon tea is enjoyed by everyone - as a delightful celebratory event or an everyday treat shared with friends and family.
